Continuation of 11. does NOT place the application in condition for allowance because:

In response to the final Office Action mailed 7/3/2008, Applicant argues (last paragraph of page 6 of the reply) that the Examiner has given an overly broad and unreasonable interpretation to what is meant by the claimed "object". In response, the Examiner respectfully disagrees and asserts that an "object" as defined by the Applicant is sufficiently described by the Elwahab reference. For example, Applicant supplies reference to their object to define it in part as audio, video, software, emergency alerts, and any other content that comes to the home or can be requested from the network via providers. In particular, Applicant's content objects may merely be software or any content that comes to the home or can be requested from the network via providers. Given this broad definition of a content object, the Examiner submits that the claimed object has been given its due reasonable interpretation in light of the reference. For in the example of Elwahab, a user transmits and receives information to and from a "smart system". The Examiner submits that the information from the user (e.g. a provider) may be seen as the broadly defined "any other content..." Further noted in the control of the smart devices of the system, a user in Elwahab also may communicate with markup pages (i.e. internet objects as seen in present claims 24-25).

For at least these reasons, the finality of the Office Action mailed 7/3/2008 is maintained.
